FILE No. 31 of 97-98 for the week ending 22-5-98.

SERIAL No. 1

18. 5 - 98. Inspected the village of Gejlopur within the limits of Jyakal. Found the streets swept and that the houses had been white washed. Manure pits both inside and out of the village were cleared of their contents. Some of these I found had been used as latrines. Had them cleaned and directed the Patel and Inspector Dade Rau who was with me to have them filled in with mud. This will take time, but it must be done to guard against the commission of nuisances. Fined the Station house officer for his apathy in this matter. Drinking water obtained from a drawing well but it should have a parapet wall around it to prevent accidents.

Inspected Malkin which is a municipal town. Found the main streets clean. More attention should be paid to the conservancy of the back streets and gullies. [manure, streets sweepings and other refuse were being accumulated in 3 or 4 open spaces. one of them almost next to the Amildars house-instead of being carted away by the Conservancy Sweepers.] Had the stuff cleared with the aid of the Police and the parts cleaned up. Looked up the drinking water reservoirs of which there are three viz: Gajapindla, Kuppusettys Kunte and Santepet Kunte The first named is fed by pipes leading from the Hosken tank (now dry) which in turn is fed by an open channel leading from some uplands a mile off where a dam has been thrown across some water courses to divert the rain water into the channel.

Kuppusettys tank or Kunte is fed by pipes leading from Gajapindla - Santepet Kunte is dependent for its supply on rain fall. As the water in all three reservoirs particularly Santi Kunte was muddy, dirty and smelling I sent a sample bottle from each to the Chemical Examiner for analysis. I may note that Gayapundla was the only reservoir that had a board prohibiting pollution.

Inspected Marti – a large village about 11 miles from Kurnool. Formed the Kumbi and Vakkala -sar. Streets very dirty. Lots of manure accumulated in the back-yards of houses. Set to work at once to have this nuisance removed, and the pits filled up. Other parts of the village fairly clean. Drinking water obtained from a large stone revetted reservoir which is protected from pollution 20-5-98.

Which I ordered to be filled up.

Visited and inspected the neighbouring[x] villages and found them all clean. The houses were white washed, but owing only to recent rain the lime has been washed away in parts. It was gratifying to find the women taking an interest in keeping their houses and yards clean. I found several of them busy with their brooms. The manure pits outside the villages had been cleaned of their contents, but not filled in, hence I found several of them had been used as latrines, and in some of them the pigs had begun to accumulate manure. I warned the people against this and after having the pits again cleaned. I directed the pakels to have them all filled up and the Inspector to see that this was done. Drinking water in all these villages obtained from draw wells.
